

What I've got up here, what we're going to talk about now, is going to our third exercise, and we've got a list of resources, and what I'd like you to do is go through that list and pick those resources you're familiar with and identify potential significance thresholds -- impact indicators, significance thresholds that you could use for that particular resource.

And the idea is you can compare with the answers we have and kind of see, you know, what we've thought about those. And there's no hard and fast answer for this. It's what you think would be a good significance threshold for that particular resource and kind of work through that thought process.