

Documentary and Panel Discussion: A Tour of River Restoration Projects Along the Colorado, Dolores, and Escalante Rivers

The Bureau of Land Management's National Training Center is presenting a documentary showcasing several river restoration projects underway along the Colorado, Dolores, and Escalante rivers. The documentary is being shown at the biennial interagency river management workshop, from the Colorado Mesa University campus in Grand Junction, Colorado. A Tour of River Restoration Projects Along the Colorado, Dolores, and Escalante Rivers will be followed by a panel discussion. The panel consists of natural resource specialists and non-governmental organization partners involved in these restoration efforts. The entire 90 minute session will be available, live, to anyone with an Internet connection. This session is free and no registration is required.

Join Us Live!
Wednesday, March 13, 2013
1:30pm-3:00pm MDT
www.blm.gov/live

If you would like to send questions for panel members, please include "Panel Questions" in the subject line and email to: madler@blm.gov. Questions sent in advance of the event are more likely to be included in the panel discussion. Should you have any questions regarding this session, please contact Maile Adler at (602) 906-5502 or madler@blm.gov.

For more information on the River Crossings: Linking River Communities workshop, please visit the event website at: www.river-management.org